FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Stigma and discrimination

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• 40% of people do not know where to go or call if they suffer from any type of violence or discrimination related to living with HIV.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Antiretroviral treatment and access to specialized services

Service delivery adapted to the COVID-19 pandemic, is NOT an available option for many people living with HIV.

• Only 3 out of 10 respondents have ARV treatment for more than 2 months (40%) only have it for one month. It worries that 2 out of 10 did NOT have enough treatment to finish one month.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Health services, including mental health

• Responses were received from 28 countries. Limitations: The survey was conducted online, limiting the participation of people with low connectivity, or who do not have or do not know how to use electronic tools.

• UNAIDS LAC, have available communication resources (infographics and information sheets) developed for this purpose. These can be found on the website: https://www.unaids.org/Undocs/2020/20200608_lac_internas/item/2555

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

FINDINGS

Almost 7 out of 10 people stated that in order to NOT interrupt their ARV treatment they need to have a safe and confidential way to obtain their medication. They must not be applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner.

• Less than two out of ten people (17%), have access to home delivery of their ARVs.

• Only 3 out of ten people were offered teledicine consultation.

• More than half (56%) of the people stated that they could suffer physical, psychological or verbal violence because of living with HIV in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Almost seven out of ten people have abstained from using social protection services in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.